PROJECT SPOTLIGHT

Here at Creative Play we believe actions speak louder than words. Check out in-depth case study of one of our most recent developments, Hinderton School, and find out more about their Creative Play playground development.

Hinderton School is a SEN Primary School that specialises in teaching children on the Autistic spectrum and with social communication difficulties. The brief given was to remove an area of tired surfacing as well as an old climbing frame and replace with like-for-like items. They also wanted to include an additional Trim Trail circuit and exciting role play area.

Hinderton School, Cheshire

Working with a SEN school, we love getting as much input as possible to ensure we are meeting the individual requirements of its pupils; and Hinderton was no different. With a focus on promoting physical play, we added a trim trail circuit with components of various difficulties to challenge the pupils as they develop. Fun role play items such as our Land Ranger were also included to encourage open-ended imaginative play.

" The children, who have autistic spectrum conditions, are now able to develop life skills through social interaction, sharing equipment and turn taking "

" The playground will help the pupils to become physically fitter, improving both their physical & mental wellbeing "

Hinderton School

Good for Mind, Body and Soul

As children complete and conquer new physical play pieces, self esteem & confidence levels are boosted.

Treat the Senses

Equipment such as slides and swings are great for sensory integration, helping children to relax.

Promote Group Play & Develop Relationships

A trim trail circuit allows children to work together & practise turn taking as they traverse different play pieces.

INSPIRATION

Creative Play have been installing play areas for more than 25 years and we have built a huge amount of experience in delivering exciting, innovative outdoor learning environments and sport & recreational facilities.

When it comes to any SEN playground development, we understand the importance of ensuring your pupils' individual needs are met. From vibrant colours to tactile surfaces, a large number of our ranges have great applications in SEN settings.
